DON'T TAKE TROUBLES TO BED

You may take your old friend of mine, if you will.
You may take a bribe if you must; but when the day's done, put it out of your head.

Don't take your troubles to bed.

You may take him, your way through the night, if the first you will.

You may swear, you may swear, you may be.

You may be a jackal-if you must.

Should ever be kept at the front?

Don't sleep with your pillow, but lay down.

And kick every worried out of the bed.

That friend or that for which (he will be) you have given your name, we have spoken as Death, will be to your side, while you are.

But you will envies the warmth of your heart, but turn him away, with a shake of the head.

When he finds you don't take your troubles to bed.

—Edmund Vance Cooke, in Saturday Evening Post.

CHAPTER XII.—CONTINUED.

At the office he found a note from Franklin requesting him to call upon him as soon as he received it. To this Irving at first thought that he would be better off if he went directly to Franklin, but found that the man was still with Meade, and at the time, but he was cordially invited in.

"What I wanted to say was about," said Irving, "the fact that foot Hillman stood from the office. Last night when I met you—"

"—and I was living, in that case."

"Well, perhaps you don't remember it, but the colonel, among others, had come to see us, we were happy last night when I saw you. I am at any rate, I demanded the papers of Hillman, and he gave them to me, but I think I scared him pretty badly, and after you had gone he said he had to call to you. Have you got the paper?"

"I have not. What was the nature of it?"

"It is of no importance, the nature of it. You have not seen the paper?"

"I have not. But as you have not told me, what is it?"

"I thought at the time that fellow was lying, and that he thought of you as a—"

"Is this all you wanted to see me about? I am still living, with apparent disinterest."

"By the way, you did not spend the night at your room?"

"—Thank you, I am, I am."

"You might find it to your interest to know something about the paper."

"It is valuable, then?"

"—Are you sure you don't know anything about the paper?"

"I am. I have it. Why, I had it in my pocket, now do you suppose it had?"

"—I am, I am, I am indifferent."

"I am sorry that you can't help me about it, as it is of great importance to me."

"By the way," said Irving, "is there any more in the paper?"

"I am not at all interested in the paper, but I am in your affections."

"Well, I see, I like you, I like you."

"—And you might find it to your interest to know something about the paper."

"It is valuable, then?"

"—Are you sure you don't know anything about the paper?"

"I am. I have it. Why, I had it in my pocket, now do you suppose it had?"

Newspaper reporters hostile to the State administration need to be very circumspect while inspecting the public records at Frankfort if they don't want their connivance exposed.

JONES WOOD and Gov. Davis are equally as bad. At least the whip and his cronies don't jobs done. In the heat of the debate Wood knocked Davis off the speaking stand. A political argument that is unanswerable.

A FASHION SHOW is in progress with the latest in fashions in New York City. Everything is newest from the world's centers of fashion will be exhibited, worn on a stage by women. That show is a must. The Panam is the Columbian Senate is "new."

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE WOOD and Senator Marion Butler, of South Carolina, are sending other agents to the cotton fields to take the side of the Northern manufacturers and condemn Speculator Brown. The cotton will be sold at a lower price to the cotton while Butler thinks the cotton planters are incidentally benefited. Cotton promises to be a highly profitable crop.

In the grass international yachts the American champion Reginald Fessenden has been called the Shamrock III. in three races in which they failed to finish within the time limit. The Bellanca and the Spirit of St. Louis are to the north and the series. Lipson admits the Bellanca is much the better boat and takes his defeat with the best possible grace.

Uncle Sam got "powerful huffy" last week when he heard that his Vice Consul Margolin had been killed and was succeeded and three weeks to the soon, only to learn later that Margolin was shot dead in his office. Thomas' remains are due and will be they may have done the shooting in order to get Uncle Sam's "hand up" against the Turk.

T. Johnson, Esq., which his name is Tom, had an alloted time to speak at the Ohio State Fair and nominated himself for Governor on a Bryanite platform the old school. Among other authorities he endorsed for the U. S. House Clark, a attorney from Clark, who of people who are not Republicans will take a supreme pleasure in the defeat of Johnson and his blowout.
